WHY MSc in MICROBIOLOGY in PUBLIC HEALTH?

Microbiology is a broad discipline that involves the study of the biology of bacteria, viruses, protozoa and fungi. The main focus of the course is the pathogenic potential of the organisms that cause disease in man. The course also covers aspects of the biochemistry, physiology and genetics of microorganisms. Recently, our knowledge of how microbes function has expanded enormously, both in the disease process and at the molecular level. Genetic engineers use bacteria and viruses to clone eukaryotic genes to study and treat human genetic disorders. Vaccines are being developed for diseases such as AIDS, Legionnaire's disease and listeriosis. In the areas of biotechnology, agriculture and food production, microbes are continually exploited for the benefit of man. Microbiologists are needed to do the research required for the future battle against diseases worldwide and to apply microbes in the production of food.

WHY UK FOR MY FURTHER STUDIES?

I had a dream for pursuing my Master's from abroad. I had an option between U.K, USA, Canada and Australia to pursue my further education. I started searching through the internet and attended a few seminars and made my mind for United Kingdom because Generally in India British degree is most acceptable degree in India rather than other countries degree. Also the education in UK is controlled by the government and standard of education is very higher than the other countries. The universities and colleges are fully equipped with the latest Equipments. Also the faculties are highly educated and learned best in their specific fields. Moreover, the best point of studying in UK is that the fees is comparatively lower than all other countries and hence this was a major plus point which led me to select UK , as it would give me an internationally recognized degree at an affordable price.

In the end I want to just thank you for your time in reviewing my application. I hope that graduate admission committee will consider my application for post graduate studies.
